

Assistant Professor of Counseling Psychology. The Department of Counseling Psychology, University of Wisconsin-Madison seeks a candidate who can contribute to the department's expertise in psychotherapy process and outcome research relevant to diverse populations, with expertise in counseling and research with LGBTQ populations preferred. Candidates should demonstrate (a) evidence of scholarly productivity related to these interest areas, with a potential for external funding; and (b) competence in classroom instruction, counseling, and clinical supervision with diverse populations. Postdoctoral teaching experience is preferred but not required.

The desired candidate will have the ability to contribute to instruction and supervision in our Master's program in counseling and our PhD program in counseling psychology, as well as undergraduate instruction related to Health Promotion and Health Equity. Training in our department emphasizes a social justice orientation and competence to serve culturally diverse populations in a broad range of settings. Ability to teach a doctoral course in personality assessment is preferred but not required.

In achievement and prestige, the University of Wisconsin-Madison has long been recognized as one of America's great universities. A public, land-grant institution, UW-Madison offers a complete spectrum of liberal arts studies, professional programs, and student activities. The campus spreads out along the south shore of Lake Mendota, encompassing wooded hills, friendly shores, and lively city streets. The department is located in the Education Building on Bascom Hill overlooking Lake Mendota, and is part of the top-rated public School of Education in the US.

Madison is the state's capital city with a population of 208,000, and offers an ideal combination of natural beauty, stimulating cultural offerings, and outdoor recreation. The city tops many "best" lists, including Best Cities (Kiplinger's Personal Finance, 2009) and America's Best Adventure Towns (National Geographic, 2009). It was rated #2 on the Forbes 2007 list of Best Places to Educate Your Child. Madison's location in south central Wisconsin makes for convenient access to Milwaukee (80 miles), Chicago (150 miles), and Minneapolis (270 miles).
