

Wednesday November 22nd 2017, 12:30 – 2:00 pm

Pavillon Adrien-Pinard, SU-1550

100 Sherbrooke West, Montreal (Quebec), H2X 3P2

A wine and cheese will follow, SU-R310

THE MAKING OF VIOLENT EXTREMISTS

Arie Kruglanski, Ph.D.

Professor, Department of Psychology
University of Maryland (Baltimore)

Arie Kruglanski is a Distinguished University Professor, a recipient of numerous awards, and is a Fellow of the American Psychological Association and the American Psychological Society. His work in the domains of human judgment and belief formation, the motivation-cognition interface, group and intergroup processes, and the psychology of human goals has been disseminated in over 300 articles, chapters, and books. As a founding Co-PI and Co-Director of START (National Center for the Study of Terrorism and the Response to Terrorism), Kruglanski also conducts research with the support of grants from the Department for Homeland Security and from the Department of Defense on the psychological processes behind radicalization, deradicalization, and terrorism.

In collaboration with the Research Laboratory on Social Behavior, directed by Robert J. Vallerand, Ph.D.

*Professor, Département de psychologie,
Université du Québec à Montréal*

<http://www.lrcs.uqam.ca/en/home/>

Upcoming Presentations

February 28th, 2018

Constantine Sedikides, Ph.D.

University of Southampton

"Nostalgia and Well-Being"

May 16th, 2018

Richard Kostner, Ph.D.

McGill University

"The Motivation Equation: The Importance of Autonomy in the Pursuit of Goals"

Past Presentations

September 20th, 2017

Barbara Fredrickson, Ph.D.

University of North Carolina

"Positivity Resonance: Implications for Health and Well-Being"